B. Blended Mode of Teaching and Learning with Flipped classes

Title of the Practice

A. Social Responsibility, Helping and Altruism

Objectives

- To develop consciousness about human values among students
- To strengthen social bondage with service to the community
- To make students establish empathy through gratitude

Context

Many students hail from rural or semi-urban background, and are aware of the plight of poverty and lack of access to resources. Challenging situations like another wave of COVID Pandemic move them emotionally creating an urge to help those in need and distress.

The Practice

By practicing altruism, kindness, compassion, gratitude, empathy and many other positive qualities emerge. Hamidian students learn that helping others is also a great way to help themselves. Altruistic activities were conducted in adopted villages by the students where they checked oxygen levels of villagers, distributed face masks, demonstrated proper handwashing techniques, especially among the youth and children. Young champions stepped up as communicators on the frontline, promoting health and safety. They took concrete efforts to reduce adverse impact of the second wave of the pandemic. While spreading goodwill, they also led the drive through heroic acts of courage and supported families and neighbouring communities.

Outcome

The new NEP clearly states that it is time to take on a policy that is undoubtedly student centric, student is the main stakeholder and that efforts must be taken to make the system respond to their dreams and aspirations. In this line of thinking this best practice gives the acceptability of many modes of learning including that of face to face learning, online learning and virtual mode.

The outcome of this blended learning is heightened teacher and student interface, time management and flexibility in teaching and learning milieu. augmented erudition skills, better access to info, enhanced gratification and learning outcomes, and prospects both to learn with others and to teach others. Teachers are more of a facilitator and learners more self-reliant.

Problems Encountered and Resources Required

Lack of regular connectivity and low bandwidth in remote and rural areas. A big constraining factor has been the financial status of rural students and availability of smart mobile phones/data with them. Some students shared their smartphones with their siblings as all were taking online classes. Background noise created frequent disruptions. ICT enabled devices were updated with Wi-Fi in each block. Some faculty members took time to get in tune with the latest teaching method and were effectively encouraged by the younger employees.

Resources

Strong internet connection, Wi-Fi, technical support for smart classrooms. Not all digital resources are dependable and easy to use. Problems are solved with co-operation of staff and students by providing suitable slots at the Network Resource Centre.

Notes (Optional)

Role of teachers is more as facilitators. Students used to complete assignments online and then come to class for discussions. Teachers used rotational model, sometimes difficult topics were given to students to study on their own, then discussed online and students shared their knowledge. Later on offline sessions addressed personal problems of slow learners. Students attended lectures, accessed course content, asked questions, and even finished their assignments online. A lot of flexibility was seen in blended teaching and learning method. Most of the classrooms (B-2, B-3, P-9, H-6, H-7, H-9, Virtual Classroom, Multipurpose Hall, and Conference Hall) have facility of computer, podium, screen, and projector.
